Cynical inner-city seventh graders are challenged by an odd idea from a math teacher. Frustrated that his students do not seem the least bit interested in learning, Mr. Collins proposes a contest to build the world's largest tetrahedron. Several students show up for the first math club, but they don't want to do something new. One picks math club over failing the class and another does not ...

ALL OF THE ABOVE by Shelley Pearsall | Kirkus Reviews

All of the Above was one of those that I'd ignored. I've read other titles by Shelly Pearsall and have always enjoyed them. Yes, I know they are middle grade books aimed at middle schoolers. But that has never stopped me from enjoying a good book. Mr. Collins struggles to spark interest in math in his students.
